University of Arizona Alumni Association Honors
"Mrs. Green" with Professional Achievement Award

(Tucson, Ariz.) – The UA Alumni Governing Board has named Gina Murphy-Darling, a.k.a. Mrs. Green, as the 2016 recipient of its Professional Achievement Award. Each year the Association confers recognition upon distinguished individuals for outstanding achievement and contributions to their profession, their communities and the University of Arizona. Murphy-Darling currently serves as a community representative on the UA's Presidents Advisory Council on Environmental Sustainability.

Murphy-Darling is the founder and voice of the Mrs. Green's World Network. The 1979 UA graduate from the UA School of Education with a degree in behavioral science, purposely transitioned from corporate executive to podcast host and sustainability advocate in 2008.

Mrs. Green's World, an internet-based podcast series, is on a mission to raise global consciousness about the impact of people on the planet. Interviewing leading experts and high profile advocates of sustainable living, Murphy-Darling has created this free and independent platform - allowing all voices to be heard as part of her passionate commitment to help create a more socially just and sustainable planet. Mrs. Green says, “I don’t tell you what to think, I just want you to.”

Murphy-Darling is also a sought-after speaker and travels extensively engaging with educators and invocators through participation in events such as Mrs. Obama's Kids' State Dinner at the White House, Sustainable Foods Institute at Monterey Bay Aquarium and the International Women's Earth and Climate Summit in New York.
